

Uniforms

Over the last 100 years, military nursing uniforms have changed significantly. From the feminine white veils and red capes of the early 20th century to the camouflage uniforms of today, nursing uniforms have altered with the changing needs, expectations and status of military nursing.

1) Compare and contrast the following uniforms.

First World War AIF nurse's uniform, 1916. AWM P07989.003

Camouflage uniform of the Australian Medical Support Force, 1994. AWM MSU/94/0042/31

2) Discuss how the image of military nursing has changed.

What did the nurses think?

Second World War

Most unsuitable uniform for New Guinea, large veils, starched collars and cuffs etc, had to be put aside. The climate was very hot and humid, no protection for mosquitoes to start with. Issued with army boiler suits and boots later, until Safari Suits could be manufactured and issued.

Second World War malaria uniform, 1944. AWM 083325

Matron Nell Williamson, 2/9th AGH; AWM S01819

This document is available on the Australian War Memorial's website at <http://www.awm.gov.au/education/resources/nurses>

You may download, display, print and reproduce this worksheet only for your personal, educational, non-commercial use or for use within your organisation, provided that you attribute the Australian War Memorial.

Vietnam War

[The uniform] is totally inappropriate ... too hot and difficult to maintain, due to lack of starch and the wet. Still wearing veils!?!??

Lieutenant Ann Hall RAANC

Nurses in day (left) and night (right) nursing uniforms, Vung Tau, AWM P04690.001

- 1) What do these opinions illustrate about women and their changing roles and attitudes?

Uniforms in another light

When 30 Australian nurses were shipwrecked and imprisoned by the Japanese at Banka Island and in Sumatra during the Second World War, they had only the uniforms on their backs. During the three and a half years in a prisoner of war camp, the nurses attributed special significance to these uniforms.

While the nurses' uniform could not convince the Japanese that the nurses were servicewomen with rank, it became the symbol of unification for the nurses. They agreed that when they were set free they would wear their uniforms and so they cared for them, patching holes and shining buttons. As it turned out, the nurses were to wear their uniforms many times before this day came - to the funerals of their comrades.

This document is available on the Australian War Memorial's website at <http://www.awm.gov.au/education/resources/nurses>

You may download, display, print and reproduce this worksheet only for your personal, educational, non-commercial use or for use within your organisation, provided that you attribute the Australian War Memorial.

By the time the nurses were rescued, their uniforms were almost in tatters, but the day they left the camp, they wore them proudly.

Those who had uniforms put them on ... this is the day they had been kept for ... we tried not to remember we'd worn them to our cobbbers' funerals.

Sister Veronica Clancy, AWM PR MSS1086

Nurses from 2/10th, 2/11th AGH and one nurse from the 4th Casualty Clearing Station arrive at the airfield in Singapore for Repatriation, September 1945. They wear their original oil-stained uniforms. AWM 044480

1. Examine the above photograph, which was taken by a Sydney Morning Herald photographer. What can you determine about these women by looking at it.
2. What significance do these uniforms have for these women? How can you tell?

This document is available on the Australian War Memorial's website at <http://www.awm.gov.au/education/resources/nurses>

You may download, display, print and reproduce this worksheet only for your personal, educational, non-commercial use or for use within your organisation, provided that you attribute the Australian War Memorial.